Owner Claims Mule Frightened to Death By Airplane Noises

CINCINNATI, Ohio. — Jack is dead—frightened to death by low-flying airplanes near here.

Jack was an eight-year-old mule owned by John Merkle, who was at work on a farm on North Bend road. Jack died with his harness on, Merkle said, as he pulled a sled.

Merkle declared that the strain on the mule's heart caused by the sudden from the aircraft was "just too much" for Jack, who never had known a sick day in his life.

Mrs. Carrie Baum, who owns the farm where Jack was being worked, told of Jack's passing thusly:

"That mule was like a member of our family. She said: "He really belonged to Mr. Merkle, who runs the farm, but I handled him and worked him all the time.

"We had him hitched to an empty sled. My son, Teddy, he's 22, was driving and I was leading Jack. Then those airplanes came over. They swooped down almost to the treetops and it looked like they were diving on us.

"Then it happened. Jack looked up at those planes for a second. He put his front feet out a little then started to back up. He shook a little, then he collapsed and died—right in his harness. When I saw his tongue get purple I knew he was dead. So I called a veterinarian.

"The doctor told me that Jack was scared to death, that his heart just stopped beating. The purple tongue and all—he had all the symptoms, the vet said."

Picture Hangs Upside Down Three Weeks; Artist Irked

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—Emerson C. Burkhart, Ohio artist, probably is still pondering the age-old query: "What IS art?"

Burkhart submitted a canvas for exhibition at an Ohio state fair. For an entire week, patrons visited the canvas, looked at it and said they admired it.

Then the artist strolled in to see how his work compared with others. He was stunned. Look, he told officials, this picture should be hung horizontal, not vertical.

"A colossal mistake," he complained to the director of the show.

The director took a natural, if not purely artistic view of the situation. Why change it, was the gist of his answer. Everybody, the director said, liked the picture just as it was. The director stood his ground. The picture was unchanged.

The picture was the underside of an abandoned bit of machinery—really should have been exhibited horizontally.

High School Chatter

Hi Neighbors!

Here we are again with the news and gossip of old A.H. S.

Guess you know of the big success of Homecoming Day. The parade started things off with a bang! Boy, were we proud of our King and Queen as they rode by! Everyone enjoyed the variety of floats, which were original as well as amusing.

After the parade everyone journeyed to the auditorium to the pep rally. The old school spirit, back of the cheers, shook the rafters! We were honored to have a number of alumni to speak to us. Among these were: Congressman W. M. Abbitt, Senator C. T. Moses, Judge J. W. Flood, Mr. DeWitt Evans, Mr. C. W. Smith and Mr. Alfred Harwood, Jr. Also the Rev. J. Marshall Walker was here to back the team.

The folks really turned out Friday night to see our boys defeat Altavista 25 to 0. The team travels to South Boston this Friday night to compete with last year's district champions. Let's back our boys and come home district "champs" of 1949!

You would think that after such a big day and exciting game everyone would be tired, but before the party stepped into full swing, there wasn't standing room left. We enjoyed having Mr. Peters and Tommy back home for the big occasion. We also saw Mr. and Mrs. Bragg and Mr. and Mrs. Kerr at the dance.

The Juniors and Seniors are all smiles. Could it be because the Seniors have started plans for their annual and the Juniors have ordered their rings?

There's always gossip, isn't there? Guess V. P. L. is getting fingerprinted out in Lynchburg, huh, Harry? Oh, yes, it's rumored Dick was out with a red headed cheer leader. He's getting extra cheering on the side lines.

The main topic at school this week are the report cards. They are always a scare.

See you next week — if — the ghosts don't get you.

STATE CORN SUPPORT PRICES ARE GIVEN

SET AT $1.57 PER BUSHEL

Price support on Virginia's big 1949 corn crop has been established at a basic rate of $1.57 a bushel, according to an announcement released by R. B. Bridgforth, State Chairman of the Production and Marketing Administration. This rate will give farmers 90 per cent of parity price of corn on October 1, 1949, and compares with a basic rate of $1.61 a bushel in effect for the state last year.

Virginia's support level on corn is substancially above the national average 1949 rate of $1.40 per bushel. Announcement has been made by the State PMA Committee that the purchase agreement plan similar to that used last year is in effect. Loans are also available.

According to Bridgforth, there is practically no approved commercial storage available in Virginia to house this year's corn crop. He repeated a warning, given by the state PMA Committee for the past several months, that farmers must arrange suitable on-farm storage if they want the benefits of the Government price support program. Under a farm storage loan program, storage structures are subject to approval by county PMA committees and periodic re-inspection when holding corn under loan. No such approval or inspection is required under a purchase agreement plan, but the corn must meet conditions of eligibility to be acceptable.

The following terms of eligibility for price support apply to 1949 corn delivered under urchase agreements:

(a) Corn must be offered only by the producer, and not by by a dealer or broker.

(b) The grade must be U. S. No. 3, better, or No. 4, solely on the factor of test weight, but otherwise No. 3, or better.

(c) Corn must be shelled.

Further details on the price support program on corn may be obtained from the Appomattox County FHA office in Appomattox.

MORE PHYSICIANS FOR RURAL AREAS

Richmond, Oct. 26.- More physicians may be expected to enter the recently neglected field of general practice in the years ahead if the choice of the senior and freshman medical students of the Medical College of Virginia at Richmond is any indication of a national trend.

A committee of the School of Medicine of the college interviewed each of its 92 senior medical students to aid them in the choice of a place to intern. It was discovered that 33.26 per cent of the physicians-to-be indicated an intention to enter general practice. In addition, 3.26 per cent of the 92 students were debating between general practice and surgery and 1.09 per cent were undecided between general practice and obstetrics.

This reversed trend of medical students to be interested in entering general practice is also evident among the freshmen medical students at the Medical College of Virginia. In a questionnaire servey to determine what phase of medical practice they expected to engage in when they finished their course, 48 mentioned general practice and 14 of these said they planned to go to a rural area.

Next to general practice freshmen medical students seemed to be interested in specializing in surgery. Also claiming considerable attention were phases of mental illness and diseases of women and children.

CIO executive board votes to aid steel workers.

About 125 citizens attended a meeting at the court house here on Friday night to participate in a discussion of the school building needs of Appomattox County, and gave general approval to a proposal for the county to apply to the State Literary Fund for a $200,000 loan to be used for the building of a modern Negro High School here.

L. Crawley, chairman of the county board of supervisors, presided at the mass meeting and stated the purpose of the meeting. There was a general discussion participated in by a representative number of the citizens present.

It is expected that the next session of the General Assembly will make grants to the counties for school purposes from existing state surpluses.

It is understood that the board of supervisors will approve applying to the State Literary Fund for the $200,000 loan and will act on acceptance of the loan when and if it is granted.

The Carver High School building need is considered by many to be the most pressing school building need in the county and the project has long been delayed for lack of funds.
